

20 YEARS LATER, '9/11' REMINDS US TO BE KIND TO ONE ANOTHER

Former Procter & Gamble executive, Glen Prasser, was flying back from Europe when his plane was diverted to Gander, Newfoundland, because of the terrorist attacks on 9/11. After spending 32 hours aboard his plane, Glen took refuge in a church and awoke the next day to the smell of moose stew prepared by its members who spent all night making food for the diverted 'plane people'. As chronicled in the hit Broadway show, Come From Away, Glen will present his personal account of this heart-warming story of human kindness at a time of great evil.
